HEALTHCARE LINEN FROM ADMIRAL

OSHA regulations specify what steps must be taken to reduce the risk of exposure to bloodborne pathogens, not only by the facility where exposure might occur, but also by the facility that processes the potentially contaminated items.

For years, Admiral has been practicing Universal Precautions in accordance with OSHA guidelines. In addition, we are proud to announce our accreditation by the Healthcare Laundry Accreditation Council.

THE ADMIRAL SERVICE/QUALITY DIFFERENCE

We offer specially identified fluid-resistant bags for your soiled items. The bag has a protective flap to ensure that no one handles any of the items once they're placed inside. We prefer the extra safety advantage of using marked laundry bags.

All Admiral healthcare team members are trained in Universal Precautions. This includes our processing plant team members as well as all Route Service Reps that provide service to healthcare clients. All team members wear PPE when handling healthcare soil.

Admiral's state-of-the-art vacuum sorting system sets us apart from other laundries. The operator scans your barcoded soil ticket and a high-powered vacuum pulls the item through an automatic counter. Once counted, items are sent to bins based on item type. The bins signal when the load is at optimum weight. This ensures accurate wash loads, which means you receive the cleanest linen possible.
